Use the Above Article to Answer the Below Questions

How much do you believe you use your cell phone on a day where you are not in school? (Not including phone calls)

Are you a person who prefers to talk to someone over the phone or to carry on long texting conversations? Why?

We all know cells are under fire from multiple people. So it is entirely fair to be either defensive or annoyed with this article. However, if you believe that the article is wrong about something. Make sure to explain what that something is, why you disagree with it, and offer at least personal evidence to back up your claim. Each of those should be a minimum of three sentences.

If you end up, for some reason, agreeing with the whole article, make sure to spend at lease a paragraph explaining why you agree, because you will need to be able to back up your point.

Cell Phones In Your Life

Now that that is done. I want each of you to do me a favor. Imagine a world where there is no social media, and how that might change your life. Literally a world where your phone can still do everything it currently does, but there is just no Snapchat, Facebook, Reddit, Twitter, Instagram, or any other social networking site.

How might this change your daily routine, and your friendships for that matter?

Do you believe that there would be more arguments or fewer arguments among people?

Do you believe that people would be more likely to listen to one another or less?

Do you believe that people would still only be able to surround themselves with others who agree with them 100%?

Do you believe that surrounding yourself with people who always believe the same thing is a good thing? Yes or No? Why?

Make sure to justify all the answers to every question posed here with at least a two sentences.
